6     B.     Specific Description of Discovery that Remains to be Completed

- 7           1.     The potential supplementation of written discovery between the parties;
8           2.     Depositions of Plaintiff and Experian;
9           3.     Potential depositions of Experian's other personnel, as appropriate;
10          4.     Depositions of third parties, as appropriate;
11          5.     Depositions of Plaintiff's expert and Experian's rebuttal expert, if necessary;
12          6.     Any additional necessary written discovery, including any follow-up meet and 13     confer to discovery that has already been propounded and/or responded to.

14     C.     Reasons Why the Remaining Discovery Was Not Completed

15           The parties can demonstrate good cause for the extension. This class case involves 16     calculation of large amounts of data from Experian's internal records. Plaintiff has propounded
17     written discovery requests designed to ascertain the Class and propounded a second set of requests
18     for production which seek background information regarding Experian's technical systems,
19     process of responding to written discovery, and specification of those portions of Plaintiff's class-
20     based discovery requests which are subject to automated and manual review. Plaintiff and 21     Experian have conferred on whether any limited return of this information can be provided.

22           Presently, the parties are in the process of scheduling Experian's 30(b)(6) deposition and 23     the deposition of Plaintiff. Give the potentially technical nature of the 30(b)(6) deposition, and 24     the fact that both depositions may impact the expert disclosures, the parties seek a 60-day extension
25     of all present case deadlines in order to ensure that the 30(b)(6) depositions can be completed prior 26     to the time for expert disclosures. This brief extension will also permit the parties to continue to 27     discuss whether some limited production in connection with Plaintiff's Second Set of Requests for 28

Production can be provided prior to Experian's 30(b)(6) deposition.

For all of these reasons, the parties request that the Court grant this request for an extension of time.
